COURSE DESCRIPTION

This program will review the current state-of-the-art diagnosis within gynecologic pathology, highlighting key areas of change and update in the field. The format of the program consists of lectures by international experts in their fields, case-based discussion, and audience led panel discussion.

Gynecologic pathology is in a period of rapid change. New diagnoses, methods, and therapies are rapidly entering diagnostic practice. Molecular diagnostics has impacted the diagnosis of sex cord stromal tumors and endometrial cancer, with consequences for diagnosis and management. Critical diagnoses of importance to the practicing pathologist will be covered. These didactic lectures will be interspersed with concrete case-based, audience and expert panel discussions.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

By the end of the course, participants will be able to:

- Recognize the major morphologic pitfalls in diagnosing benign and malignant ovarian sex cord stromal tumors.
- Select and interpret immunostains and molecular tests for differential diagnosis.
- Identify which patients merit referral to genetic counseling to assess risk of a hereditary syndrome (DICER1, SMARCA4).
- Identify new morphologic variants of endometrial cancer, as well as pitfalls in pseudoneoplastic and pseudomalignant entities.
- Utilize selected immunohistochemical markers to arrive at the correct diagnosis.
- Understand the increasing role of molecular subtyping in endometrial carcinoma.
- Utilize a strategic approach to diagnosis of products of conception.
- Be familiar with critical diagnoses in products of conception, and their impact on patient management.

TARGET AUDIENCE

This course is intended for practicing pathologists, especially those in the community or private practice, residents and fellows in pathology training programs. The emphasis of this course will be on practical management in the day-to-day practice setting.
