COURSE DESCRIPTION

Advancing Knowledge in Multidisciplinary Lung Cancer Care is intended to provide a diverse and comprehensive overview of the rapidly evolving field of lung cancer. Faculty members from different specialties will provide the latest recommendations and best practices based on newly emerging data and trials. Keck faculty and prominent guest speakers will provide specific insights into the most current management of ground glass opacities, as well as how to maintain best practices within the context of international guidelines for lung cancer care.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

By the end of the course, participants will be able to:

- Describe the role of a multidisciplinary team in the preparation and management of lung cancer patients undergoing different modalities of therapy.
- Review different techniques and approaches to diagnose, stage and manage lung cancer patients.
- State the roles and indications of local therapy (surgery, radiation, tumor ablation, bronchoscopy) for locally advanced and metastatic lung cancers.
- Describe the advances in systemic therapies for various stages and types of lung cancer.
- Identify patients who should be referred for complex lung cancer treatment.
- Explain how advances in cancer treatment has impacted the long-term outlook for patients and the ethical implications this has on our prior treatment paradigms.

TARGET AUDIENCE

This course is intended for academic and private practice primary care physicians, specialists, and subspecialists of all disciplines, as well as other allied health care professionals, seeking to enhance their understanding of lung cancer treatment options in order to select the optimal management for their patients.
